Vt. Gas Is Urged: Speed Up Pipeline by Gordon Dritschilo, Rutland Herald Staff Writer

This is a reprint of a Rutland Herald Article that appeard on Friday, June 27, 2014 written by Gordon Dritschilo.

Two business organizations are urging Vermont Gas Systems to get its planned pipeline to Rutland faster.

The company just received the last of the permits to bring the natural gas pipeline from Colchester to Middlebury and has begun planning for Phase 2, which would extend the line under Lake Champlain to International Paper in Ticonderoga, N.Y.

Rutland Economic Development Corp. and the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce sent a letter to Vermont Gas CEO Don Gilbert, asking the company to begin preliminary work on Phase 3, which would bring the pipeline to Rutland, promptly.

“Waiting until Phase 2 is approved to begin planning for Phase 3 would risk unnecessary delays in reaching Rutland County,” the letter read. “With the goal of completing this project at the earliest possible opportunity, we respectfully request that Vermont Gas begin a formal and collaborative route-finding process that includes representatives from each of the Phase 3 communities and other partners.”

The letter said the company should identify a preferred route by the fall, or by the end of 2014 at the latest, which would allow planning and engineering to take place before the regulatory process.

Vermont Gas spokesman Steve Wark said little to address the substance of the request when reached Thursday, but reiterated the company’s commitment to getting the pipeline to Rutland.

“We share the goals of those organizations,” he said. “They continue to be good partners. ... Their request is practical. It makes a lot of sense.”

Wark said route-finding and the associated public engagement is a difficult process and the company wants to do it right.

“It’s too soon to tell what a realistic timeline is,” he said. “We’ve committed to be in Rutland by 2020, if the regulatory process allows. Backing that time-line off is going to require more research before we commit to that. ... We don’t want to over-promise and under-deliver.”

Thomas Donahue, executive vice president of the Rutland Chamber, said Thursday that Vermont Gas could get the pipeline to Rutland a year sooner if it got started on siting.

“The businesses we’re trying to retain — if we’re saying five years and that’s the window they’re looking at — they’re more likely to build that into the plan,” he said. “Even six years, it’s a window we want to shorten as much as possible.”

With a short enough timeline, Donahue said, businesses that would prefer to have piped-in natural gas might be willing to use compressed or liquefied gas as a temporary alternative.

He said he was watching plant closings elsewhere in the state and did not want to lose local manufacturers to consolidation elsewhere if natural gas might make a difference.

“We haven’t got anybody who’s threatening to leave, but they don’t threaten to leave,” Donahue said. “Those decisions are made elsewhere and then announced.”

Jamie Stewart, executive director of REDC, said an early start to the siting process would also address the lingering question regarding the pipeline — where will it go?

“If we can start to address that question early, we can alleviate worries some people have and give peo ple an opportunity to see where the pipeline will be servicing communities,” he said. “People will see this isn’t a pipeline that’s just to serve Omya, GE, the hospital, that it will pro vide significant residential benefits.”

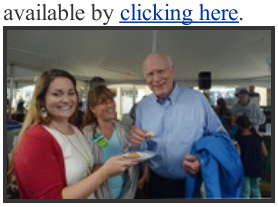
Rutland Herald Sponsors Winter In August Celebration - August 12th

The 33rd Annual Winter In August Celebration sponsored by Rutland Herald will take place on Tuesday, August 12th outside the Chamber Offices, 50 Merchants Row, Downtown Rutland. This food fest, which started over thirty years ago, is held to recognize the positive economic impact that the ski areas have on the region.
In 2012, for the first time we held Winter In August under tents on Merchants Row as a street festival. The new location was a huge hit.

Space is available for food vendors; this is a great opportunity to showcase your business to about 600 people. The vendor form is available by clicking here.



Ticket are on sale now! Prices will remain $10 at the door and $9 in advance. Pre-purchasing allows you quicker access on the day of the event.

For more information or to participate in Winter In August as a food vendor call Penny at 802-773-2747 or email penny@rutlandvermont.com.

Free Business Seminar!

The Profit Equation,
Five Key Numbers Every Business Owner MUST know

You will learn the Profit Equation which is based on and includes the FIVE most important numbers in your business. When business owners work "ON" their business, it is important that they focus on one of these five. These 5 numbers impact your bottom line and drive results. The Actions and strategies to impact each key number will be presented.

You will leave with the example worksheet that we will review in the presentation (business case study), and a worksheet that you can complete for your own business. Additionally, you will leave with ideas, and specific actions you can take to impact each number to drive better results in your own business

Presented by: Hannah Abrams of AdviCoach on Wednesday, July 9th from 8am-9:30am at the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce Conference Room, located at 50 Merchants Row in Downtown Rutland. Registration is required for this free event by clicking here or calling 802-776-8922
